NEW AND VALUABLE SCHOOL BOOK!

THE attention of School Committees, Teachers and Parents is invited to the examination of the "JUVENILE READER," a selection of easy Reading Lessons, by a Teacher, a new edition of which, revised and corrected, we have just published. It is believed that the book is one which has been very much wanted in our common schools, and indeed it was compiled at the request of many of our best Teachers. The compiler is a gentleman of known abilities, and long experience in his profession. The pieces in this book, are chiefly selected from popular works designed for youth, and it is believed, will have a healthy moral influence in those schools in which it is adopted. The book comes at a very low price and has been adopted in a great many Schools with decided approbation, and having been stereotyped, is free from the danger of having any alterations made in it, which is the greatest trouble with all school books.

Those connected with schools, or interested in any manner, are requested to call and examine it.

BANGOR,

[illegible] 1837.

We extract from the St Louis Republican of the 10th inst the following particulars of the outrage and melancholy catastrophe at Alton Ill The papers are filled with accounts of the affair, which are variously colored according to the varying sentiments upon the subject of slavery The zealous abolitionists regard Mr Lovejoy as having suffered a glorious martyrdom in the most glorious cause ever espoused by man The passionate, relentless and slave-holding southerners close the account by saying "it served him right," and expressing a hope that all other "self willed enthusiasts" will be served in the same way Those on the contrary standing upon middle ground acknowledging the enormity of the evil of slavery, yet decidedly objecting to the course taken by the abolitionists to subdue the evil, while they bestow deserved execrations upon the savage violence of the heartless ruffians in the riot cannot but admit that the catastrophe was the result of repeated opposition to those principles of human action which the Almighty, for wise [illegible] in the breast of man

ABOLITION EXCITEMENT AT ALTON We subjoin the following copy of a letter from a friend at Alton

ALTON, Wednesday evening, Nov 8

The curse of Abolitionism has again fallen upon our town Yesterday morning, at 4 o clock, P M a fourth abolition press was landed from the Missouri Fulton, and put into Godfrey Gilman & Co s warehouse under guard of the friends of Mr Lovejoy During the day of yesterday much excitement prevailed, and during the evening many individuals collected with a full determination to destroy it The warehouse was again guarded by some 18 or 20 friends of the cause, and when the attack was made, Mr Lovejoy fired from a window and shot down a Mr Bishop The populace infuriated at this, and not being able to make entrance set fire to the building. The individual who applied the torch to the roof was about to be fired upon (or was fired upon) by Mr Lovejoy when he, Mr L received a mortal wound from some one of the assailants Two others inside received wounds, but not dangerous. The press was then given up and destroyed To day we have peace and quietness, and trust in God, that it may continue"

In addition to the foregoing, we learn that the crowd attacked the house of Messrs Godfrey Gilman & Co about eleven o clock in the night but finding it defended, they retired In a short time afterwards the attack was renewed At each time no violence was manifested, except to demand the press Those in the house having refused to give up possession, and having expressed their determination to resist, it was resolved by the assailants to set fire to the building For this purpose a ladder was raised and a fire kindled on the roof The fire when first kindled did not burn freely, and a second person ascended to add fuel to it. Whilst he was in the act of ascending the ladder, the Rev Mr Lovejoy came out of the house and stood opposite to the S W corner of the building He fired from this position several times, at the man ascending but without effect A man from behind a pile of lumber on the wharf below, fired at Mr L the gun was charged with two balls both of which entered Mr L s body, near or in the chest. Mr L dropped the gun he was in the act of firing ran into the house, and as he reached the Clerk s room fell on the threshhold and expired instantly

Those in the house now proposed surrendering, if the fire was put out The crowd without ascended and carried water in their hats to extinguish the flames The doors were then thrown open and as the crowd rushed in, two guns were fired, by some of those entering The ball from one of the guns lodged in the ancle of a Mr Roff, one of the defenders of the house, and it is yet doubtful, whether he will not lose his leg The other ball lodged in the foot of Mr Weller. Several other persons in the house were injured, in attempting to escape As soon as the crowd had gained possession, they took the press, broke it into many pieces and threw it into the river All then dispersed, and by two in the morning the town was again quiet.

The Mayor, we learn, was on the ground, attempting to arrest the disturbance, but without any effect He narrowly escaped being wounded or killed, as a ball perforated his hat

Mr Lovejoy and Mr Bishop were both interred yesterday, and every thing seemed to indicate that the storm had subsided Report states that Mr L on the evening preceding his death had agreed to leave Alton and remove his press, but was dissuaded by Dr Beecher and some others from doing so, on the ground, that the war had been commenced there and must be terminated there

If the press had not been surrendered, a large amount of property must have been destroyed, as the stone house in which the press was, contained more than $100,000 worth of goods, exclusive of the value of the building

PROPERTY OF PENNSYLVANIA According to a tabular statement published by authority of the Auditor General, the total adjusted valuation of the real property, &c in the several counties in the Commonwealth, is $245,573,402

Valuation of personal property, &c 48 835,784

Grand total, $294,509,186

PHENOMENA Mr Joseph B Varney, of Kensington, has a tree in his orchard which has blossomed four times this season (in the months of June, July, August and September respectively) the three first blooms producing fruit, but the last was blighted by the frost The novel spectacle was exhibited of a large tree bearing three different grades of apples beautifully interspersed with blooms of the fourth family

[Portsmouth N H Gazette]

There is an Egyptian at Constantinople diving with his feet, and astonishing the lazy Turks with the riches he fishes out of the Bosphorus. He will probably rake up a little cotton by-and-by, if there be no contents. Also [illegible] pearls, &c.

PORTUGUESE Selim Effendi, the new Turkish Ambassador to London, has in consequence of the absence of his wives in England, renounced his intention of bringing his harem with him.

A Dutchman lately swam one hundred and [illegible] yards under water, without coming to the surface, the feat, upon which a considerable wager was depending, was accomplished

Every body has heard, or rather every one who has read the Life of Pope, remembers the account of the [illegible] attachment between the Lord of Twickenham and Mary Wortley Montague and how suddenly and unaccountably their attachment was broken, and how the Poet's Love was changed to the most bitter and unforgiving hatred Many reasons were assigned to account for the strange alteration, but, the true one was never certainly known The following is extracted by the N York Mirror of last week, from a new novel by L E L, which has been published in England and is shortly to be issued from the American press, the name of which is 'Ethel Churchill

Miss Landon's novel is characterized by the London Times as a "very clever book, full of brilliant thoughts fine poetry, acute wit and observation, which, for its depth and feeling, is quite unwomanlike" As a novel, it says, it may be popular and appreciated by women who make the tender passion the business of life, and all other things subservient to it, but with men, who make of love, a pastime, the melancholy and love sick tale of so many people weeping and wailing, billing and cooing, dying, dandling, despairing, and poetizing, is somewhat too profuse and sentimental' Two love apart, there are in the book, passages evincing extraordinary talent This elegant episode in the work is selected as an illustration

It is a very beautiful and poetical conception, and with a refined imagination, embodies the incident so interesting and remarkable in the Life of Pope

The scene is at Twickenham, Pope s villa,—

Where the heroine, Lady Marchmont, goes with Lady Mary Wortley Montague

'It [illegible] of Arcadia, the scene that the lawn presented A few late flowers lingered among the shrubs, and the rich colouring on the autumnal foliage supplied the place of bloom The garden was laid out with exquisite taste, and the groups scattered around, seemed animated with the spirit of the place, for they placed themselves into little knots,—just where they were calculated to produce the best effect There was an elegant collation ready, and while Pope talked of

'His humble roof, and poet s fare,'

he had neglected nothing that could please his assembled guests To Lady Marchmont he was the most interesting object of all, although his petits soins were addressed to Lady Wortley Montague, who received them with that encouraging coquetry born of flattered vanity

'Flattery is like champagne, it soon gets in to the head, but in Pope s flattery there was too much of the heart Long after hours of neglect and mortification dearly atoned for that morning s pleasant delusion There is something in genius for which fate demands severe atonement In some things Pope s was an exception to the general lot He dwelt in that lettered ease to which his own taste gave refinement, his talents gained no obscurity, but early reached their just appreciation, his friends were those whose friendship is honour, and he lived in a very court of personal homage and flattery But fortune only neglected to do what nature had already done Dwarfed from his birth, that slender frame was tenanted by acute physicians, which, acting upon a mind even more sensitive than his body, made life one long scene of irritation and suffering The fingers were contracted by pain that yet gave the sweetest music to their page satire was at once his power and (the sense of power is sweet to us all) his refuge

"The passion and melancholy of one or two poems, just suffice to show what a world of affection and sentiment was checked and subdued, because their indulgence had been only too painful, but to dry was to be as flowing as his own verses he was at her side on whom he lavished so much passionate and graceful flattery, and Lady Mary paid him back, not in kind, for his heart went with his words, but hers was only sweet lip-service'

"There is a cruelty in feminine coquetry, which is one of nature s contradictions Formed of the softest materials of the gentle smile and the soothing word yet nothing can exceed its utter hard heartedness Its element is vanity, of the coldest, harshest, and most selfish order, it sacrifices all sense of right, all kind of feelings, all pity, for the sake of a transient triumph Lady Mary knew for when has woman not known her power She knew that she was wholly beloved by a heart proud sensitive and desponding She herself had warmed fear into hope had made passion seem possible to one who felt, keenly felt, how much nature had set him apart If genius for one moment believed that it could create love, as it could all else, hers was the fault, she nursed the delusion it was a worthy tribute to her self love

"'Truly her ladyship, said the duke of Wharton, 'parades Parnassus a little too much Does she suppose nobody is to be flattered but herself? Come, Hervey, let us try a little whole some neglect' Forthwith they devoted themselves to Lady Marchmont Lady Mary s smiles were unmarked, and her witticisms fell dead weights so far as they were concerned This was too much for a wit and a beauty to endure Of what avail was flattery that she only heard herself? She grew impatient till the collation was over, and was the first to step out upon the lawn

"Pope did the honors of his garden, which was a poem in itself He showed them his favourite willow fittest tree for such a soil so pale and tender in its green, so delicate a lining within the leaves, so fragile and so drooping, with so mournful a murmur when the wind stirs its slender branches The whole scene was marked by that air of refined and tranquil beauty which is the charm of an English landscape The fields had that glossy green, both refreshing and cheerful, the slight ascents were clothed with trees some retaining their verdure, others wearing those warm and passionate colours that, like all things coloured by passion, so soon exhaust themselves Yet, what a gorgeous splendour is on an autumnal landscape' The horse chestnut, with its rich mixture of orange and brown the sycamore, with its warrior scarlet— the coral red of the small leaves of the hawthorn, mixed together with an oriental pomp, as if the year died, like the Assyrian monarch, on a pyre of all precious things Winding its way in broken silver, the sunshine dancing on every ripple, the Thames lay at the edge of the grassy sward. The blue sky, with the light clouds floating on its surface, was mirrored in the depths of the river; but, as it seemed somewhat of its high tranquillity under the influence of our sphere, the reflection was agitated and tremulous, while the reality was calm and still It is but the type of our rest [illegible] it, and the [illegible] which we aspire, we look up, and the heavens are above, holy and tranquil, we look down on the mirror below, and they are varying and troubled [illegible] but few flowers, and those pale and faint flowers, in the garden there Pope gathered and offered to his fair guests Lady Marchmont placed hers carefully in her girdle "I shall keep even the withered leaves as a relick,' said she with a smile even more flattering than her words It was well that she engrossed the attention of her host from the dialogue going on between Lord Hervey and Lady Mary

"'You learned the language of flowers in the East,' said he, 'but I thought dwarfs were only the messengers'

"'And such they are now,' replied his listener 'here is one flower for you'

"'The rest the gods dispersed on empty air,' and she flung the blossoms carelessly from her

'Pope did not see the action, for he was pointing out a beautiful break in the view' 'I have, said he, long had a favorite project that of planting an old Gothic cathedral in trees Tall poplars, with their white stems, the lower branches cut away, would serve for the pillars while different heights would form the aisles The thick, green boughs would shed a dim religious light, and some stately old tree would have a fine effect as the tower'

"'A charming idea,' cried Wharton, 'and we all know

"'That sweet saint whose name the shrine would bear'

But while we are waiting for the temple, can you not show us the altar? We want to see your grotto'

"Pope desired nothing better than to show us his new toy, and led the way to the pretty and fanciful cave which was but just finished It was duly admired; but while looking around, Wharton observed some verses lying on the seat"

"A treasure for the public good,' exclaimed he, 'I volunteer reading them aloud'

"Nay, nay, that is very unfair, cried Pope who, nevertheless, did not secretly dislike the proposal

"Oh!' replied the duke, 'we will allow for your modesty s 'sweet reluctant, amorous delay' but read them I must and shall Then turning towards Lady Mary, he read the following lines

'Ah friend 'tis true this truth you lovers know,
In vain my structures rise, my gardens grow,
In vain fair Thames reflects the double scene
Of hanging woodlands, and of sloping green
Joy lives not here, to happier seats it flies
And only lives where Wortley wasts her eyes'

"Pray, 'fair inspirer of the tender strain, let me lay the offering at your feet

"'Under them, if you please,' said she, her fine features expressing the most utter contempt, and trampling the luckless compliment in the dust, she took Lord Hervey's hand, and exclaiming 'The atmosphere of this place is too oppressive for me, left the grotto but part of her whisper to her companion was meant to be audible

"'A sign-post likeness of the human race,
That is at once resemblance and disgrace'

"Lady Marchmont was left alone in the grot to with its ill-fated master, and every kindly feeling in her nature was in arms Affecting not to have noticed what passed, she approached where Pope stood speechless pale with anger and a yet deeper emotion she said, in a voice whose usual sweetness was sweeter than ever, with its soothing and conciliating tone 'There is one part of your garden, Mr Pope, which I must entreat you to show me I have a dear, kind uncle at home, who owes you many a delightful evening He will never forgive me unless I write him word that I have seen

'The grapes long lingering on the sunny wall

'Pope took her hand mechanically and led her forth, but the effort at self control was too much for his weak frame The drops stood on that pale, high brow, which was the poetry of his face, and he leaned against the railing 'No!' exclaimed he, passionately, after a few minutes silence, 'your courtesy, lady, cannot disguise from me that you, too, heard the insult of that heartless woman Let me speak I know I may trust your kindness; and even if you turned into after ridicule the bitter outpouring of this moment s misery, you would not do as others, in whom I trusted, have done Heavens! how madly I have loved her madly, indeed since it made me forget the guilt that nature has set between us she so beautiful, and, I, as she has just said who only resemble my kind to disgrace it' Yet she sought me first she led me on she taught me to think that the utter prostration of the heart was something in her eyes that a mind like hers could appreciate mind Fool, fool, that I have been! What have I done, that I should be thus set apart from my kind—disfigured, disgraced, immeasurably wretched? Oh! that I might lay my weary head on my mother earth and die!

"'We could not spare you,' exclaimed Lady Marchmont, taking his hand affectionately, the tears starting in her eyes, 'but not for this moment s mortification must you forget your other friends how much even strangers love and admire you Think of your own glorious genius, and the happiness which it bestows I have but one relative in the world, he is an old, military man, and I think of him with cheerfulness, whenever I send him a new page of yours I speak but as one of many who never name you but with admiration and with gratitude'

"Pope pressed the hand that yet remained in his own 'God bless you, my dear, kind child! I thank you for calling my power to my mind She shall learn that the worm on which she trod has a sting'

"They loitered awhile, till the irritated host was equal to joining his guests The boat was ready, and the whole party joined in laughing at Lady Marchmont for her long tete a tete with Pope

"'I am not jealous,' cried Lady Mary

"'Go, triumph in a heart that once was mine'

"'I think, said Lady Marchmont, pointedly, there has been as little heart in the matter as possible but you shall none of you laugh me out of my cordial admiration of a man of first-rate genius, and whose personal infirmities call upon us for the kindliest sympathy'

"'By Jove! you are right,' cried the Duke of Wharton how much vanity may be pardoned in one who has such cause for just pride' He is building up a [illegible] his language, which will last when we, with our small hopes and influences, are as much forgotten as if we had never been.'

"'I see no great good in being remembered,' retorted Lady Mary 'I would fain concentrate existence in the present. I would forget in order to enjoy. As to memory, it only reminds me that I am growing older every day, and as to hope, it only puts one out of present with possession'

"'All this is very like of our common place existences,' replied Lady Marchmont 'but the gifted mind has a diviner element'

"'How charming is divine philosophy

"'Not harsh and rugged, as dull fools believe,' exclaimed Lord Hervey, with a sneer.

"'With the single exception of Lady Marchmont,' 'we have all behaved abominably to-day. How I will [illegible] that Pope writes, and, what is more, I will ride to Twickenham to tell him so,' and, having made this compromise with his conscience, the [illegible] tion dropped

"From that day, however, all friendship was at an end between Lady Mary and Pope How he revenged himself is well known His lines yet remain, stamped with all the bitterness of wounded vanity and mortified affection Strange the process by which love turns into hate! I pity it even more than I blame it What unutterable wretchedness must the heart have undergone! what scorn and what sorrow must have been endured before revenge could become a refuge and a resource!'

FAITH BY BULWER.

It is in sorrow or sickness that we learn why faith was given as a soother to man, faith, which is hope, with a holier name; hope that knows neither decay nor death Ah! how wisely do you speak of the philosophy of belief! It is, indeed, the telescope which leads our vision to the stars And to you, my beloved, comprehended and known at last, to you I leave, when I am gone, that monitor, that friend, you will know yourself what you teach to me And when you look not on the heaven alone, but in all space on all the illimitable creation, you will know that I am there! For the home of a spirit is wherever spreads the universal presence of God And to what numerous stages of being, what paths, what duties, what active and glorious tasks in other worlds, may we not be trained, perhaps to know and share them together, and mount, age after age, higher in the scale of being For surely, in heaven there is no pause or torpor; we do not lie down in calm and unimprovable repose

LUCKY THOUGHT Three men were recently rescued, at the town of Preston, (Eng) from a perilous and unenviable situation, by the lucky thought of a woman They were masons, and employed in building the lofty chimney of a steam saw mill They had nearly completed their work, and were "topping off" at an elevation of one hundred and eighty feet from the ground, when, by some accident, the rope connected with the blocks, by which the materials were raised to the workmen, broke, and as it was only by the help of the same rope that the workmen could descend from their perilous eminence, it will easily be conceived that their situation was by no means an enviable one

Various means were tried to get a line within their reach by the help of a kite, and by other plans At length three o clock in the afternoon had arrived, and the three poor fellows were still roosting at their awful elevation, when the distressed wife of one of the unfortunate, had the felicity to remember that her husband had on a new pair of knit stockings "Use your knife, she cried out, "and cut the toe of your stocking, continue the ravelling until you get a length sufficient to reach the earth, then attach a small stone to it to sink it here" The man obeyed the oracle, and in a short time he had a length of worsted long enough to reach the ground, which he let down The next business was to tie the worsted to a thin cord, which the men drew up, and the original rope to the block having been fastened to the cord, it was also drawn up, and so adjusted as to enable them with safety to descend on terra firma

WERRY PARTICULAR A traveller found a team in the road the other night the driver so intoxicated that he had nearly fallen from his seat His head was in the mire, and his arm so twisted in the shaft, that had the horses started, it must have been broken short off After helping him up, the traveller asked his name, but all the answer he could get was, "I am al, ways werry particular indeed about my name but I like advice when well meant" "Well I advise you then to be less particular in future about your name, and more so about your body

STERNUTATORIES A young medical gentleman right from the schools, was called upon to extract a substance from the nose of a child, but not succeeding he applied to one of his older brethren for an instrument and sought his advice His friend inquired if he had tried sternutatories (medicines that produce sneezing) The young doctor said he had, but it had slipped off

"Did you ever catch me in a lie, Tom?" "No Jim you are out of one into another so quick, it would puzzle the d l to catch you"

LONG TIME AGO

I

On the lake where droop'd the willow,
Long time ago!
Where the rock threw back the billow
Brighter than snow
Dwelt a maid, beloved and cherished
By high and low,
But with autumn a leaf she perished,
Long time ago!

II

Rock, and tree, and flowing water,
Long time ago
Bird, and bee, and Moss im taught her
Love s spell to know
While to my fond words she listened,
Murmuring low
Tenderly her dove eyes glistened,
Long time ago!

III

Mingled were our hearts forever!
Long time ago!
Can I now forget her? Never!
No, lost one, no!
To her grave these tears are given
Ever to flow
She's the star I missed from heaven,
Long time ago!

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM The following recommendations from Dr Jacob Myers
Extract of a letter from Dr. Jacob Myers
"The Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam has been sold in this country for two years, and the medicine has gained an uncommon celebrity, for it scarcely in one instance failed of having the desired effect I am by no means in favor of the many nostrums, most of which are impositions upon a credulous public but that which I know by experience to be effectual, I cannot help but give my approbation thereto A counterfeit preparation has been offered here by a travelling agent of Comstock, N Y, and there is also another article vended here that is strongly suspected to be spurious

ARRANGEMENTS OF THE KENNEBEC AND BOSTON STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY 1837

THE superior Steam Packet NEW ENGLAND, Nathaniel Kimball, Master, will leave Gardiner every MONDAY and FRIDAY, at 3 o'clock, P. M. and Bath at 6 o'clock P. M.

Leave Lewis's Wharf, Boston, or Bath and Gardiner every WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 7 o'clock, P. M.

Carriages will be in readiness to take passengers to and from Hallowell, Augusta and Waterville, on the arrival of the Boat, and on the days of her sailing.

Hack fare from Augusta 37½ cts.; from Hallowell 25 cents. Books kept at the principal Hotels in Hallowell and Augusta.

FARE.

From Gardiner to Boston, $4 00 } And found.
" Bath " " $3 50 }
Deck Passengers, $2 00 }

The NEW ENGLAND is 3½ years old 173 feet long, and 207 tons burthen. During the past winter she has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and the proprietors have spared neither pains nor expense to render her in all respects worthy of public confidence. That she is the fastest boat on the eastern coast is now universally admitted and her superiority as a sea-boat has been fully proved.

Travellers from the eastern part of Maine to Boston and from Boston eastward, will find this route in many respects preferable to any other. The mail stages from Bangor and Belfast arrive before the departure of the boat; and the boat arrives at Gardiner on her return passages from three to six hours before the departure of the eastern stages; thus affording travellers an opportunity of spending several hours in Gardiner, Hallowell and Augusta.
